This cult was transmitted from generation to generation. Our ancestors considered bread as a symbol of being just as in known words of the prayer: «...Give us this day our daily bread». Also, bread became the main element of people's traditions and rituals. Many generations kept anxious attitude to it. Irrespective of where and how the bread is baked, it always remains a food product, which can not be confused with any other and which retains its originality - its destination, taste and smell.
